Some people incorrectly teach that an R "always"
controls the vowel.

This is NOT TRUE! There ARE exceptions.

One of those exceptions is when the vowel is the first syllable in a word, like "arrange." The "a" makes the schwa sound "uh" and the emphasis is placed on that syllable. The r's that follow it have the usual r sound.

What is meant by an R Controlled Digraph or Trigraph?

When the letter R follows a vowel or vowels it affects the sounds that are made. It can do this when only 1 vowel comes before the R making a digraph (2 letters seen and 1 sound heard) or when 2 vowels come before the R making a trigraph (3 letters seen and 1 sound heard).
Remember, in these cases these sounds occur when an "r"
is present.

AAR as in Aardvark = the double "a" + an "r" makes the sound "ar" as in "car."

AR as in car = pronounced "ar" like the name of the letter "r."

aura = a special atmosphere.

There is a special
atmosphere or aura
around an angel.

AUR as in aura = the same
"ar" sound as in "car."

UAR as in lifeguard = "ar"
the same as "ar" in "car."
