Some people incorrectly teach that an R "always" controls the vowel.

This is NOT TRUE! There ARE exceptions.

One of those exceptions is when the vowel is the first syllable in a word, like "arrange." The "a" makes the schwa sound "uh" and the emphasis is placed on that syllable. The r's that follow it have the usual r sound.

What is meant by an R Controlled Digraph or Trigraph?

When the letter R follows a vowel or vowels it affects the sounds that are made. It can do this when only 1 vowel comes before the R making a digraph (2 letters seen and 1 sound heard) or when 2 vowels come before the R making a trigraph (3 letters seen and 1 sound heard). Remember, in these cases these sounds occur when an "r" is present.

EAR as in "ear."

EER as in deer = the same sound as in "ear." 🙈

EIR as in Madeira, Portugal = the same sound as in "ear." 🙈

Darwin's Theory IS NOT Truth

EOR "ear" as in "theory" = because the "o" is silent - it makes the same sound as in "ear." 🙈

ERE as in "sphere" the same sound as in "ear." 🙈
The last "e" is Silent.

IER "ear" as in Cashier.
The "i" is silent.
